Where Are We Going?
Doug Kashorek

by

"Obey your leaders and submit to them, for they are keeping watch over your souls, as those who will have to give an account. Let them do this with joy and not with groaning, for that would be of no advantage to you" Hebrews 13:17.

The best leaders aren't usually ones who seek to lead but are often those thrust into leadership roles by others or circumstances. In the past century, 36th Street has had good leaders who have given us a gloried past that we plan to celebrate in about 29 months and want to prepare us for a strong future.

While we all are a mixture of leadership styles, our strengths are currently heavy in teaching and nurturing. In these we excel, and so we are a very loving and supporting church family that is well-grounded in biblical truth. Laying the groundwork for a solid church here in the next 100 years, though, will require us to hone our visionary and warrior skills, but the previous century has developed sages among us.

As leaders, sages are steeped in experience and wisdom and can guide the other four styles in the biblical direction God would want us to go.

So, where are we going? That may depend on what type of follower you are. Are you sitting back with a spiritual bag of popcorn waiting to see how this movie ends? Or, are you rolling up your sleeves and donning the full armor of God to work and battle along with your leaders?
